

Shaping change: this is what drives us at Forschungszentrum Jülich. As a member of the Helmholtz Association with some 7,600 employees, we conduct interdisciplinary research into a digitalized society, a climate-friendly energy system, and a sustainable economy. We focus on the natural, life, and engineering sciences in the fields of information, energy, and bioeconomy. We combine this with expertise in high-performance computing and artificial intelligence using unique scientific infrastructures.

The Institute of Fusion Energy and Nuclear Waste Management – Plasma Physics (IFN-1) coordinates research into plasma-wall interaction in fusion facilities as part of the Helmholtz Association's national fusion programme. This work is part of the European fusion programme within the EUROfusion consortium and encompasses experimental and theoretical aspects of the development and qualification of materials for the first wall in fusion reactors, as well as the investigation of plasma-wall interaction in the large-scale experiments Wendelstein 7-X and, in future, ITER. The material concepts and experimental methods developed within the framework of fusion research are also being applied to renewable energies. In the research area of plasma-wall interaction, critical questions regarding safety, i.e. fuel retention and dust formation, as well as regarding service life, i.e. erosion and integrity, of first wall components are being investigated.
